Dr. Rawley W. Martin, of Lynchburg, and Dr. R. S. Martin, of Stuart, Va., president and sectwarry, respectively, of the State Board of Medical Examiners, are at Murphy's. They are in the city to conduct the semi-annual examination for medical students, which will begin to-day.

An almost exact double of Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York, was at Murphy's yesterday, and spent a while in the lobby during the afternoon. He wore the characteristic Hughes whiskers, and politicians pointed him out to one another and wondered among themselves if he was really the New York executive. Finally the State of the wondering politicians knew that though the Governor might not be at testodar, he would probably be a little less public about it if he cared to take a "smile." He was in the lobby for some time, and attracted a good deal of attention, owing to the fact that he is a "dead ringer" to the Governor of the Empire State.

either red or white badges. Carmick chose red for his emblem, and the Patterson followers adopted the white. One of the prettlest features of the campaign was the presentation of handsome floral tributes to the candidates in their respective colors at every meeting, the speeches being made by some of the proudest and handsomest women in Tennessee.

"There is but a single issue of importance involved in the fight, and that is the liquor question. Carmack has taken a direct stand from the start for Statewide prohibition, and Governor Patterson has contended that it was in accordance with Democratic principles to permit each county to speak for itself on the subject. In other words, there is practically no liquor sold now in the entire State except in Memphis, Chattanooga and Nashville. Carmack's platform permits the rest of the State, which is dry, to say whether or not these cities shall continue to license bars, while Patterson says, in view of the well established Democratic doctrine of local self-government, that each bounty and city should determine the matter for itself.
